News from New Brunswick Public Library Service

Kate Thompson, Head of Public Services Development

A collaboration with RPC on radon test distribution is winding down. Radon testing is not as effective in the spring and summer months as homes are generally more open to outside air. The project, which is the first of its kind in Canada, made tests available to New Brunswick homeowners through public libraries from mid-October to late February. To date, more than 10,500 long-term radon tests have been distributed.

Summer Reading Club 2025 set a historic record with 12,398 children registered across the province (11,543 in person and 855 online), making it the most successful year in the history of the NBPLS SRC program.
